Foreword

The study of Greek manuscripts of medical content has seen a significant, though not exclusive, investigation by Alain Touwaide, whose life of scholar has been entirely devoted to the knowledge and valorization of the medical traditions of the Mediterranean world with a particular reference to the history of ancient and medieval Greek medicine.

The revisions and updates of the catalogues of Greek medical manuscripts compiled in the early 20th century by an équipe of philologists, guided by the distinguished historian of ancient Greek philosophy and medicine Hermann Diels (Die Handschriften der antiken Ärzte), are a cornerstone of Touwaide's scientific research on medical manuscripts, the further developments of which already include plans for a detailed catalogue of all surviving witnesses according to the norms of modern catalography.

Four years after his 2016 voluminous Census of Greek Medical Manuscripts, the publication of this new and substantial reference work constitutes a further step, complementary to the previous one, of his programme that will ultimately allow for the critical edition of a series of Greek medical texts in a way reminiscent of the Corpus Medicorum conceived by Diels over a century ago as the natural outcome of the catalogues of manuscripts that he coordinated.

If Alain Touwaide embarked on an arduous task with his Census and the compilation of an updated list of Greek manuscripts with medical contents—many of which were not listed in Diels' early 20th-century catalogues—the completion of a renewed Diels is a no less demanding endeavour. Diels' catalogues, which have been the reference for over a century for any scholar interested in the study of late antique and medieval Greek medicine from any perspective, are known, indeed, to suffer several limitations—besides the incompleteness of their inventory of manuscripts (well highlighted by the numerous complements provided in the Census)—that can be traced to the difficulty in identifying manuscripts generated by Diels' use of shelfmarks which have been made obsolete since by changes in the name of libraries or collections, in ownership, or in the location of collections. To further make research laborious, the printing of Diels' original edition is rather unclear.

Alain Touwaide has chosen to exactly reproduce the substance of Diels' work, even though he significantly intervened with great acumen on the structure, citation format, and presentation of the text, to make its contents more immediately usable and its consultation easier. An innovative organization of data in five tomes (in which the reproduction of Diels' original text in a decidedly more readable form is followed by two different methods of accessing the information, by type of contents—in tomes two through four—and by manuscript—in the fifth and final tome) is accompanied by an articulated system of indices designed to combine the need to reproduce Diels' original text ad litteram and the scientific imperative to update and standardize the method of referencing the manuscripts, and also to multiply the keys for searching the texts. In this view, Touwaide's decision to split the list of authors and works is revealing as it allows for the identification of texts by both their Greek and Latin title (albeit following the form, which is not always consistent, of the titles in Diels' original version), thus providing a first effort for a future standardization. Equally inspired by a justifiable need for clarity and simplification is the choice of accompanying the index of the original shelfmarks of manuscripts with a list of the English names of the cities and libraries. Finally, the layout of this renewed Diels clearly improves on the original edition, structuring its presentation in a much clearer and more effective way through different levels of indentation.

Those who are acquainted with Alain Touwaide know that only his visionary and tenacious spirit, supported by an unshakable patience and a truly extraordinary work capacity, could have pushed him to embark alone on the revision of the catalogues that Diels conceived and could complete thanks to the collaboration of a team of no fewer than thirty scholars. Touwaide's revision required many long years of meticulous work, with a sheer quantity of doublechecks, corrections, and identifications of new locations and shelfmarks, as well as in situ autoptic inspection of many manuscripts and sometimes even of entire collections.

Though constantly making explicit its connection with Diels' original work through its coherent and functional system of cross-references, the present revision of Diels will ultimately make it unnecessary to refer to the old Diels and make it possible, instead, to work only with updated lists of manuscripts. Furthermore, the multiple indices extremely well designed by Touwaide and the cross-referencing they make possible pave the way to a future, highly desirable transfer of data from a printed form to an open database, much of the necessary material of which is contained in the present work, in addition to the new data already provided by the Census. It can be expected that such a database will be constantly expanded and updated by integrating the results of the new developments and research that the catalogue that we have here will undoubtedly contribute to, promote, and generate.

The renewed Diels that we have here deserves to be hailed as an invaluable reference for both the niche of scholars scrutinizing Greek medical manuscripts and texts, and the wider circle of the historians of medicine, pharmacy, and ancient and medieval science, in a way that faithfully reflects the cross-disciplinary approach to the study of medical traditions that Alain Touwaide has convincingly advocated for for years in the name of a fruitful alliance of sciences and the humanities.

We now wish that, as a further contribution to the knowledge of the ancient Greek medical tradition, he will publish a much needed catalogue of Greek medical manuscripts and texts, not only those listed in Diels, but also the many new ones of which he has revealed the existence thanks to his unwavering energy, his devotion to research, and the passion for Greek medicine that has constantly distinguished his life.

Introduction

Just over a century has passed since a team of scholars from across Europe, led by German historian of ancient philosophy and science Hermann Diels (1848–1922)[1], compiled the manuscripts containing Greek medical texts and their medieval translations into a catalogue[2]. Following such classical bibliographies as the Bibliotheca Graeca by Johann Albert Fabricius (1668–1736)[3] and the several Bibliothecae by Albrecht von Haller (1708–1777)[4], Diels, as the catalogue became known, was a landmark in classical and medico-historical scholarship[5]. It was not completely

1 For a broad approach to Diels' multifaceted activity, see for example Calder et al. 1999. All works referred to in this introduction are cited in an abbreviated form (author's last name and year of publication). For the full reference, see the bibliography at pp. xxi–xxx.

2 The catalogue was published in two issues in 1905 and 1906, in the proceedings of Berlin Academy of Science, with a supplement in 1908 in the same series (Diels 1905, 1906a, and 1908, respectively). The 1905 and 1906 issues were published together as a volume in 1906 (Diels 1906b) with a slightly different title (Die Handschriften der antiken Ärzte, Griechische Abteilung) which implied that a similar programme would have dealt with the Latin manuscripts. The frontmatter of the second issue (1906a), which provided a general presentation of the programme, the list of the collaborators, and the bibliography, is reproduced as the front matter of this volume with the same pagination as in the first publication. All three issues (1905, 1906a, and 1908) were reprinted in 1970 with an introduction by Fridolf Kudlien (1928–2008) (Kudlien 1970). The translations under consideration were those in Syriac, Arabic, Hebrew, and Latin according to the treatises.
All references to the catalogue here and in the present work comprise two elements: the first identifies the issue of the catalogue (I, II, or N [for Nachtrag = Supplement]), and the second (in Arabic numerals) provides the number of the page(s) referred to (e.g., I.22 or N.49). A number in Arabic numerals between parentheses after the second element, such as e.g., II.63 (2), indicates the number of mentions of a manuscript on the same page.

3 Fabricius' Bibliotheca Graeca was originally published in 14 volumes between 1705 and 1728, with a second edition started as early as 1708 and pursued until 1754, and also a third edition of Volumes 1 and 2 published in 1718 and 1752, respectively. The whole Bibliotheca was further published in a revised edition by Gottlieb Christopher Harles (1738–1815) in 12 volumes published between 1790 and 1809, with an Index in 1838. Under the general designation Bibliotheca Graeca, all volumes have a distinctive title that indicates their respective contents. In the first volume this title makes an explicit reference to manuscripts (... notitia Scriptorum Veterum Graecorum quorumcunque monumenta integra, aut fragmenta edita exstant: tum plerorumque è MSS. ac deperditis ...). On Fabricius, see Verner 1966.

4 The first of Haller's Bibliothecae was the Bibliotheca botanica (1771–1772), which included large chapters on ancient physicians (see for example, Dioscorides, vol. 1, pp. 79–87 [page 79 is numbered 97]). It was followed by the Bibliotheca chirurgica (1774–1775), the Bibliotheca anatomica (1774–1777), and the Bibliotheca medicinae practicae (1776–1788).

5 For the history of the search for the manuscripts of Greek medical texts from the Renaissance to Diels, see Touwaide 2009, particularly pp. 456–508.

unprecedented, however. From the late eighteenth century on, several similar compilations were made, indeed, but they relied either on earlier literature or on in situ inspection of just some collections by single scholars. These were the bibliographies compiled by Johann Christian Gottlieb Ackermann (1756–1801)[6] and the pioneering search for manuscripts by the German scholar Friedrich Reinhold Dietz (1804–1836) in the 1830s[7], followed shortly after by the exploratory missions of the French historian of medicine Charles Daremberg (1817–1872), mostly in England[8], with a similar collection of material in loco at the Bibliothèque nationale in Paris by the Greek ophthalmologist Georges Costomiris (1849–1902)[9]. Diels' enterprise was different in its systematicity and scale, in addition to its organization, its team[10], and its international network[11] which combined in-house bibliographical research[12] and in-

6 Ackermann's bibliographies with their lists of manuscripts for Hippocrates, Dioscorides and Galen, were published in Harles' edition of Fabricius' Bibliotheca Graeca (vol. 2 [1791], pp. 506–611, 4 [1795], pp. 673–702, and 5 [1796], pp. 377–500, respectively). The lists of Hippocratic and Galenic manuscripts were reproduced in the edition of these authors in Kühn's Medicorum Graecorum Opera quae exstant under the title Historia literaria (for Hippocrates, see vol. 1 [1825], pp. I–CCVI; for Galen, see vol. 1 [1821]), pp. XIX–CCLXV). Interestingly enough, Diels referred to these two lists. The list of manuscripts for Dioscorides, De materia medica, in Kühn's Medicorum Graecorum Opera quae exstant (see vol. 1 [1829], pp. XX–XXVI) did not reproduce Ackermann's, but was compiled by the editor of the text, Kurt Sprengel (1766–1833).

7 Dietz traveled through Germany, Italy, Spain, France, and Britain, systematically searching for codices containing Greek medical texts (see Dietz 1832: IX–X; Dietz 1834: 1.IV), principally Hippocrates, but also Oribasius (he was supposed to prepare an edition for the corpus edited by Kühn), Aetius, the commentators on Hippocrates, Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius, Greek chemical works, Soranus, Paul of Aegina, Rufus of Ephesus, Erotianus, Nicander, Theophilus, Symeon Seth, and others (e.g., Severus iatrosophist whose treatise he published [Dietz 1836]).

8 See the reports of his travels in Daremberg 1845, 1848, 1851, and 1852, with a reproduction of the last two in the form of a monograph in 1853.

9 Costomiris published the results of his investigations at the Bibliothèque nationale in a series of five contributions to the Revue des études grecques published between 1889 and 1897.

10 The collaborators of the program are listed in the front matter of the 1906 issue and the 1906 reprint (p. X) with some further names in the 1908 supplement (p. 23). Besides the collaborators in loco (among whom were Ph.D. candidates) coordinated in collaboration by Diels and Johan Ludwig Heiberg (1854–1928), the team included several German scholars as Joseph Heeg (1881–1916) in Munich, Georg Helmreich (1849–1921) in Ansbach, Johannes Ilberg (1860–1930) in Leipzig, Karl Kalbfleich (1868–1946) in Marburg, Iwan von Müller (1830–1917) at that time in Munich, Paul Schwarz (1867–1938), then in Berlin, and Max Wellmann (1863–1933). Their number was higher, however, as the reading of the catalogues indicates: the annotations that accompany the mention of some manuscripts refer to scholars whose name does not appear in the two lists of collaborators.

11 The list of collaborators includes several individuals from abroad who were librarians or academics with a special interest in the history of ancient medicine and medical literature, including translations. These scholars were the following (in alphabetical order of last name): Hartwig (Henry) Derembourg (1844–1908) in Paris; Eduard Gottlob (1856–1922) in Krems a.

situ examination of entire library collections by local scholars or members of Diels' team in mission abroad[13].

Remarkably enough, the vast collection of data contained in the two issues of Diels' catalogues was assembled in barely four years[14], witnessing an exceptional mobilization of efforts and resources[15]. Although a supplement—presented as the first—was published in 1908, it was not followed by any other. Shortly after, the team lost some of its collaborators in the First World War[16], and the systematic search for the manuscripts of ancient medical texts was no longer pursued. Nevertheless, several

d. Donau; Montague Rhodes James (1862–1936) in Cambridge; Philip Christian Molhuysen (1870–1944) in Leiden; Alessandro Olivieri (1872–1950) in Naples; Adriano Piccolomini (1843–1907) in Cesena; Anton Ritter von Premerstein (1869–1935) in Vienna; Hans Raeder (1859–1969) in Copenhagen; Walter Scott (1855–1925) in Oxford, with a parenthesis in Montreal (1905–1908); Hermann Schöne (1870–1941) in Basel; Rezső Vári (1867–1940) in Budapest, and Eric Otto Windstedt (1880–1955) in Oxford. This list is not exhaustive, however, as other names appear scattered in the catalogues. The different collaborators interacted as the references to collations (see below) indicate.

12 The consulted bibliography (listed in the 1906a issue [pp. XI–XXIII] with a supplement in 1908 [pp. 23–24]) does not account for the full extent of the library resources consulted by the collaborators of the catalogues, which contain scattered references to works not included in the bibliographical lists.

13 One such mission was that of Max Wellmann, who spent 1906–1907 in Italy, where he particularly investigated the collections of the Vatican and the Marciana libraries. As a result, the 1908 supplement contains multiple annotations made on the basis of his personal consultation of manuscripts.

14 To give an idea of the sheer quantity of data presented in the catalogues, suffice it to say that the number of items from Greek manuscripts only amounts to over 14,000. To this we should add the multiple collations of manuscripts made by the collaborators of the programme during in loco research stays or on their behalf that are mentioned in the catalogue. Ilberg, for example, collated himself or received collations of most of the Hippocratic writings from manuscripts at the Vatican Library, and in Florence, Venice, Vienna, and Paris, whereas Helmreich concentrated on Galen (in one case at least, he had a collation of all but one manuscript of a Galenic treatise; see I.83–84).

15 For the history of the programme, see Kollesch 1973, 1989, and 1999; and more recently, Nutton 2004.

16 This was the case of Bruno Rappaport (1875–1915), who managed the data of the catalogues in collaboration with Joahnnes Mewald (1880–1964). On this, see Diels' introductory remarks (Vorbemerkungen) to the catalogue (Diels 1906a: pp. I–IX), which include the reports by Rappaport (pp. III–VI) and Mewaldt (pp. VI–VIII). On Rappaport, see the obituary by Regling, 1920. Another victim of the First World War was Joseph Heeg. During the compilation of the catalogues, the program lost another of its members, the orientalist Ludwig Nix (1865–1904) who had collected much material about the Arabic translations of Greek medical works.

editions of Greek medical texts were published thanks to the material collected during the compiling of the catalogues[17].

Addenda and corrigenda to Diels[18], studies of the manuscripts or tradition of specific medical treatises[19], and the systematic inventory of the manuscripts of texts to be edited, with the analysis of their tradition[20], punctuated the twentieth-century scholarship devoted to the ancient medical literature. After World War II, an 17 The first such edition was that of Philumenus, De venenatis animalibus, by Max Wellmann who discovered the text in the manuscript Vaticanus graecus 284 during his research stay at the Vatican Library (Wellmann 1908). This edition, which inaugurated the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum, brilliantly illustrated the function of the catalogues as a source of firsthand material for the preparation of the critical editions to be published in the Corpus. It is probably significant that it was followed in 1914 by the edition of the Arabic translation of a Pseudo-Galenic treatise by Gotthelf Bergsträsser (1886–1933) (Bergsträsser 1914), and the first edition of Galen in the Corpus by three collaborators of the programme (Mewaldt et al. 1914). Another Galenic edition, prepared by another group of three collaborators, followed the next year (Diels et al. 1915), together with Celsus by Friedrich Marx (1869–1941) and, the following year, Quintus Serenus Sammonicus by Friedrich Vollmer (1867–1923). After a short interruption due to World War I, no fewer than 15 editions were published between 1921 and 1937, with one edition every year from 1926 on, including (in chronological order of publication) the vast medical encyclopedias of Paul of Aegina (Heiberg 1921–1924), Oribasius (Raeder 1926, and 1928–1933), and Aetius (partim; Olivieri, 1935), in addition to the first Hippocratic edition (Heiberg et al., 1927), Soranus (Ilberg, 1927), Galenic commentaries on Hippocratic treatises (Wenkebach 1934 and 1936) and Galenic works (Koch et al. 1923; De Boer 1937). All this attested to the vitality of the Corpus and the usefulness of the catalogue.

18 As early as 1916, Giovanni Mercati (1866–1957), then a scrittore at the Vatican Library, published some addenda (Mercati 1916, 1917a, and 1917b). Corrections like these are scattered throughout twentieth-century scholarly publications related to the Greek medical literature. Most of them can be found in Touwaide 2016, passim, together with new ones. Additions and corrections to Diels' lists of manuscripts of the Latin translations of Greek medical texts have been systematically made, though later. Richard Durling (1932–1999) revised Diels' lists of the Galenic Latin manuscripts (Durling 1967 and 1981, completed only recently by Fortuna and Raia 2006; a cumulative catalogue of the Galenic and Pseudo-Galenic Latin texts [including manuscripts] compiled by Stefania Fortuna and her group is now available online in the form of a constant work in progress [Galeno. Catalogo delle traduzioni latine]). Pearl Kibre (1902–1985) compiled new lists of the Hippocratic Latin manuscripts in several installments (1975–1982) followed by a publication in the form of a monographic catalogue in 1985. It may be relevant to note here that Durling expanded his search for Latin medical manuscripts by browsing a collection of material similar to Diels, Kristeller's Iter Italicum (Durling 1985–1993).

19 An early work of this type is Ilberg 1911 on Soranus, followed shortly after by Diels 1912 on Galen's commentary on Hippocrates Prorrheticum, and Helmreich 1913 on Symeon Seth.

20 The best examples are the introductions to the editions published in the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum (which became more developed over time). Their template includes a list of manuscripts, their description, and a detailed philological analysis. Although these introductions focus on identifying the manuscript(s) to be used as a source or sources of the editions, they provide relevant data on codicology and book history.

unprecedented increase in the interest in paleography and codicology[21] soon led to a renewed search for, and study of, manuscripts[22], new catalogues[23], and, more recently, computerized databases allowing for the storage and multi-criteria querying of increasingly larger amounts of information[24], in addition to the digitization of the collections of manuscripts of several libraries across the world[25]. In the field of Greek medical manuscripts and texts, this resulted in the rediscovery or, in some cases, in the true discovery of manuscripts[26], new catalogues of medical manuscripts[27], the history

21 In the field of Greek codicology and palaeography, and also textual history, this interest was pioneered by such scholars as Joseph Mogenet (1913–1980), Herbert Hunger (1914–2000), Jean Irigoin (1920–2006), and Paul Canart (1927–2017). It subsequently led to an increased institutionalization of these disciplines illustrated, among others, by a series of international conferences started in 1974 (see Paléographie, 1977). For a recent esquisse of the history of codicology and paleography during the twentieth century, see, for example, Touwaide 2010.

22 Whereas the type of research by Alphonse Dain (1896–1964), Paul Henry (1906–1984), Alexander Turyn (1900–1981), and Jean Irigoin on technical texts (Dain 1930, 1933, 1946), Plotin (Henry 1938, 1941), the Greek tragics (Turyn 1943, 1952, 1957) and Pindar (Turyn 1932, and Irigoin 1952), respectively, was relatively rare until then in the academic production, it became more common later. For examples of such a line of investigation, see Eleuteri 1981 on a literary text (Musaeus) and Sonderkamp 1987 on a Greek medical treatise (Theophanes Nonnos/Chrysobalantes).

23 The increase in the publication of catalogues of manuscripts can be best measured by comparing the successive editions of the so-called Richard (Richard 1948, 1958, and 1964, followed by such a punctual review of new catalogues as Irigoin 1970, and the major updated editions of Richard by Olivier 1995 and 2018).

24 One such database is PINAKES currently hosted and maintained by the Section Grecque of the Institut de Recherche et d'Histoire des Textes (IRHT) of the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS), in Paris. It is built on the basis of the earlier research conducted at the Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies at University of Toronto by Robert E. Sinkewicz, who compiled available printed catalogues of manuscripts and published the resulting data in the form of microfiches (Sinkewicz and Hayes 1989; Sinkewicz 1990 and 1992). In the matter of medical manuscripts and texts, see the database built on Diels accessible online through the website of the Institute for the Preservation of Medical Traditions. A precursor of this type of database was the catalogue of incipits of Latin medical treatises compiled as early as 1937 by Lynn Thorndike (1882–1965) and Pearl Kibre (1937). After a revised edition published in 1963, this catalogue has been complemented by Linda E. Voigts and Patricia D. Kurtz (Voigts and Kurz 2004), and transformed in digital form (first as a CD-Rom and now as a database consultable online on the site of the University of Missouri Kansas City).

25 See, for example, the site Gallica, of the Bibliothèque nationale de France, teca of the Biblioteca Medicea Laurenziana in Firenze, DVL-DigiVatLib of the Vatican Library, DigitalBodleian, Digitised Manuscripts of the British Library or, to mention just some, e-codices for the manuscripts in Swiss collections. Significantly enough, the most recent release of the site of the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum includes links to the digital version of the manuscripts of the authors for which critical editions have been published in the Corpus.

26 The most spectacular case has been the discovery of the forgotten manuscript Thessaloniki, Vlatadon 14, which contains a Galenic text which had remained unknown thus far. See Pietrobelli, 2010, for example. For other cases, see, for example, Roselli 2009 ([Hippocrates]) or of collections of such codices[28], an accrued attention to medical illustration[29], studies of the textual tradition of Greek medical texts[30] or genres[31], the medical production of some regions[32], and new critical editions, particularly from the mid-twentieth century onward[33]. This activity, which also generated a forum in the form of a series of conferences launched by Antonio Garzya (1927–2012) in 1990 and regularly held Perilli 2011 (Galen's Hippocratic lexicon), and Chatzopoulou 2014 and Tselikas 2014 about iatrosofia.

27 For some catalogues, see Hunger and Kresten as early as 1969 about the series medici graeci of the National Library of Austria in Vienna, and, more recently, Bouras-Vallianatos 2015 about the holdings of the Wellcome Library in London, with a short supplement in Bouras-Vallianatos 2020. A different type of catalogue is that of Formentin 1978, about the libraries of a region.

28 See, for example, Formentin 1997 about the medical manuscripts in the collection of the national library in Naples.

29 A pioneering work in this field was MacKinney 1965, which lists the medieval manuscripts known at that time in several languages with medical illustrations, with some descriptive elements. Recently see Bernabò 2010.

30 For the entire tradition of some works, see, for example (in chronological order of publication), Kudlien 1960 (Hippocrates, De articulis), Rivier 1962 (Hippocrates, De morbo sacro), and Alexanderson 1963 (Hippocrates, Prognosticon) and 1967 (Galen, De crisibus). Among the studies in subsequent years, one might cite Morani 1981 (Nemesius) or, more recently, Perilli 1999 (Galen's Hippocratic lexicon). Similar work is being done in Latin, for example by Green 1996 and 1997, on Trotula. Research was also devoted to some lesser-known physicians such as Mercurius (see the study by Masullo 2006), or to some segments or manuscripts of the tradition of one or more works. This is the case of Wilson 1987, for example, regarding a group of Galenic manuscripts (the codices copied by Ioannikios), and Petit 2006 on a group of manuscripts in relation with a text ([Galen], Introductio).

31 For this type of catalogue, see, for example, Ihm 2002 on medical commentaries (with references to the manuscripts), or Karas 1994, and Tselikas 1995 on iatrosophia (Byzantine and later).

32 For Southern Italy, for example, see Ieraci Bio 1989.

33 After an interruption provoked by World War II, the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum published anew critical editions as early as 1950 with a predilection for Galen, also including, however, Hippocratic treatises, Aretaeus, Rufus of Ephesus, Aetius, and Leo medicus, and, more recently (from 1983 on), Stephanus of Athens and Johannes of Alexandria. In the 1960s, the French Collection des universités de France launched a new Hippocrates (see Joly 1978 for the first volume; the programme has been pursued by Jacques Jouanna) and, very recently, a new Galen (see Boudon 2000 for the first volume). All this in addition to editions in series specifically devoted to the history of ancient and medieval/Byzantine medicine as Studies in Ancient Medicine (for example, Dickson 1998 on Stephanus, and Zipser 2009 on Johannes archiater) or, more recently, Medicine in the Medieval Mediterranean (Bennett 2016 on hospital formularies) and Textos Médicos – Ediciones Críticas (Lamagna 2017 on Johannes Actuarius' Greek translation of Avicenna, De urinis). See also such volumes as Pritchet 1975 and 1982 (both on Johannes of Alexandria) or Garzya and Masullo 2004 (on Cassius Iatrosophista). To this, one might add editions of iatrosofia (for example, Tselikas and Ilioudis 1995 and 1997, or Clark 2011).

since[34], was accompanied by a transformation in the history of science and the history of the book. While the former moved its focus from the Great Scientists[35] to the histoire vécue[36], the latter shifted from book production[37] to book use, that is, to reading, studying, annotating, sharing, and collecting[38].

Both transformational trends highlighted limitations of Diels' catalogues: they are devoted to authored works with a focus on the major physicians of classical antiquity and of the period that became defined in the meantime as Late Antiquity, that is, the period up to the end of the School of Alexandria in the 7th century A.D[39]. With only some exceptions[40], they omit the multiple small, but no less important, anonymous works, notebooks, and other formularies that give witness to the practice of medicine[41], and also many of the physicians of all epochs (but especially the Byzantine ones, also with some exceptions, however[42]) who have not been credited with such a foundational role as Hippocrates and Galen.

34 For the proceedings of the first conference, see Garzya 1992. The conference has been fairly consistently held every four years, alternately in Naples and Paris. The many communications presented in each edition dealt with a great many authors and texts, including lesser known physicians and their treatises. The proceedings were first edited by Antonio Garzya, and then by Garzya in collaboration with Jacques Jouanna before being edited by both, along with Véronique Boudon-Millot and Amneris Roselli.

35 As an example of this historiography, see the monumental encyclopedic Introduction to the History of Science (1927–1948) of George Sarton (1884–1956).

36 See, for example, Perrin 1988 on the skin (followed by Herida 1998, on skin in the Hippocratic writings), Rey 1993 on pain, or Dumouchel 1995 on emotions. One might also mention here the development of the history of the body, particularly its specific perception and its representation, including its defects (Fischer 1991).

37 The focus on book production might be best identified by the development of codicology, explicitly formalized as a discipline in its own right during this period (see Dain 1949).

38 On this approach, see, for example, the works of Guglielmo Cavallo, particularly Cavallo 1988 about libraries, and Cavallo and Chartier 1995 on reading, with a panoramic presentation of medieval reading culture. On reading Greek medical literature, more specifically, see, for example, Cavallo 1993 or, more recently, Mondrain 2003.

39 On the chonological span of the catalogues (from the 5th century B.C. to the 7th A.D.), see Bruno Rappaport's report in the 1906 issue, p. III.

40 Some of these exceptions might be the Excerpta (or Excerpta varia) listed for several authors, as well as the pseudepigraphic literature (mostly Hippocratic and Galenic) (see for example the remedies attributed to, or extracted from the works of, Hippocrates [I.48–49] and Galen [I.132–133]), in addition to some iatrosophia of the Ottoman period listed mostly under Hippocrates (I.42), Galen (I.123 and N.38) and Meletius (II.64), but also under Erasistratos (II.36) and Magnus (II.59), besides references to iatrosophic literature about Iustus (N.56), Logadius (N.56), Lucas (N.56), and Syncellus (N.66).

41 For such works (hospital formularies), see, for example, Bennett, 2016.

42 These exceptions are the following (in alphabetical order of their names as in Diels) with their reference to Diels: Abraham (II.3; N.42), Antonius Pyropulus (II.15; N.45), Beniaminus (II.22;

A New Diels is now a desideratum of the scholarly community[43]. While urgently needed, it would require that Greek medical manuscripts be newly catalogued and their texts accurately identified, building on the twentieth-century classical scholarship briefly presented above and indeed, going even further through a renewed in situ autoptic analysis of manuscripts and the reading of their many texts[44]. Whereas codicological analysis would allow for a better approximation of the time or period and place of production of the manuscripts (and also of their texts in some cases), reading and precise identification of all their texts would lead to a more complete and accurate knowledge of medical literature and practice from antiquity to the Renaissance, particularly thanks to the treatises of the period posterior to the 7th century and, for all periods, the multiple anonymous texts of all types not considered in Diels' catalogues.

The present work aims to lead the study of Greek medical manuscripts and literature of the classical and post-classical periods in that direction. While it fundamentally reproduces Diels' lists of Greek manuscripts, it reformats them in different, yet complementary, ways and provides new search tools that may be used for at least two purposes: compiling a catalogue of Greek medical manuscripts that will eventually generate the material necessary for a New Diels, and investigating the tradition, reception, and intellectual, and scientific history of Greek medical literature and medicine.

N.46), Cassius iatrosophista (II.22; N.46), Chariton (II.23), Constantinus Meliteniota (II.24; N.47), Damascenus (II.25), Eleutherus (II.35), Esdras propheta (II.37–38; N.50–51), Euphemius Siculus (II.38; N.51), Iacobus Psychrestus (II.50), Ioannes Chumnos (II.52), Ioannes Esdra (II.53), Ioannes episcopus Prisdyanesis (II.54; N.55), Ioannes Staphidaces (II.55; N.55), Leo (II.57; N.56), Manuel Comnenus (N.57), Maximus (Planudes?) (II.62; N.57), Neophytus Prodromenus (II.68; N.60), Nicolaus Myrepsus (II.69; N.60), Nicomedes iatrosophista (II.69), Paulus Nicaeensis (II.81; N.63), Perzoe (II.81), Philippus Xerus (N.63), Photius monachus (II.85),Taronitus (II.100; N.67), Theophilus (II.101–106; N.68), Theophylactus Simocata (II.106; N.68), and Ioannes Zacharias Actuarius (II.108–111; N.69).

43 Some instrumenta studiorum that might be considered as partial New Diels are already available. One of them is the catalogue of the manuscripts of the Latin translations of Hippocrates compiled by Pearl Kibre (above). Other two are the analytical lists of the manuscripts of the Arabic translations of Greek medical literature and original Arabic medical literature compiled by Sezgin 1970 (medicine, pharmacy, and zoology) and 1971 (alchemy, chemistry, botany, and agriculture), and Ullmann 1970 (medicine). One might also add the inventory of illustrated medical manuscripts compiled by MacKinney as early as 1965 (not only Greek and Latin, but also Syriac, Arabic and Turkish, and the roman languages, English, and German). Relevant also, the bibliographical lists compiled by Gerhard Fichtner (1932–2012) for Hippocrates and Galen (first published on demand, with several successive versions from 1985 on, and now available on line on the website of Corpus Medicorum Graecorum).

44 For a proposal in that sense, see Touwaide 2018. Whereas a publication upon completion of the research would be highly desirable, a gradual publication of available data in the form of a work in progress on the Internet might be useful, be it for a catalogue of manuscripts or a New Diels.

As such, the present work offers a set of new instrumenta studiorum for further developments in manuscript studies, the classical, medical and scientific traditions, and medical history.

Each of the five tomes of the present work has a specific content and purpose. The first tome exactly reproduces Diels' lists of Greek medical manuscripts[45], excluding the lists of the manuscripts containing the possible medieval translations of Greek medical texts into Syriac, Arabic, Hebrew, or Latin according to the treatises. It is not a photographic reproduction of Diels' original pages, however. Whereas lists of manuscripts in the original printing of Diels are presented in the form of blocks of continuous texts, they are rearranged here in the form of enumerations that clearly distinguish each item. The bibliography of Diels has been treated in a similar way for the purposes of clarity. The lists of manuscripts and the bibliography comprise most of the first tome, which is complemented by two indices: one of the authors and texts included in Diels, and the other of the manuscripts listed in Diels. For the purposes of easy and direct consultation, both of these indices open the first tome, which aims to not only make Diels available in a handy format, but to facilitate its use in research.

The remaining four tomes differ with regard to substance and purpose. All of them reproduce the contents of the manuscripts as described in Diels, including all annotations about title, incipit, desinit and lacunae, in addition to possible similarities with other manuscripts, sources, or copies. They proceed by manuscript (instead of by authors and works as in Diels' original publication). Identification of manuscripts exactly reproduces Diels' elements (city, library, and collection as appropriate, followed by shelfmark). The identification of many manuscripts required updating. This is the case for the several items known in Diels through earlier literature without exact identification. It is also the case of the codices destroyed during the two World Wars of the twentieth century, and of those that have changed location after the publication of Diels. Finally, it is also the case for those manuscripts which have received new shelfmarks. For all of these manuscripts, tomes two through five provide supplementary information with their exact identification, their state of preservation and location, or 45 Until a new reprint is published, Diels does not seem to be widely available (in spite of the 1970 reprint). WorldCat lists only 20 copies across the world. Nevertheless, digital copies are available on the Internet with different levels of quality, accuracy, and completeness via such sites as the Corpus Medicorum Graecorum, the Royal College of Physicians (RCP) in London, the Medic@ collection of the BIUSanté in Paris, the Digitale Bibliothek of the Münchener DigitalisierungsZentrum of the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek in Munich, and Google. These copies are linked on some other websites such as the Internet Archive, the UK Medical Heritage Library, the Medical Heritage Library, and European Libraries. As mentioned above, a database built on the basis of Diels is available on the website of the Institute for the Preservation of Medical Traditions.

their new shelfmark[46]. Another contribution of these tomes is their index of manuscripts, which includes possible new locations and shelfmarks, thus allowing one to search for manuscripts in two different, yet complementary ways: by their location and shelfmark as in Diels' time or in present time.

Besides these shared features, tomes two through five differ further by their content. Tomes two through four are each devoted to one author or a group of authors: tome two is devoted to Hippocrates, tome three to Galen, and tome four to the authors defined in Diels as the remaining physicians (Die übrigen griechischen Ärzte ausser Galenos und Hippocrates), that is, all the other authors of classical and late antiquity, with some Byzantine ones as well[47]. These three volumes aim to allow for a general study of the whole manuscript tradition of the textual bodies they are devoted to. Although they still have a limited documentary basis, they compensate for the lack of relevant instruments in currently available literature, and they provide the substance for first reconstructions of the whole tradition of the treatises by (or attributed to) Hippocrates, Galen, and the other Greek physicians considered by Diels.

Tome five goes further in laying down the basis of what will become a general catalogue of Greek medical manuscripts, as it lists the entire contents of all the manuscripts mentioned in Diels. It proceeds as do tomes two through four, by city and library in alphabetical order and, for each library, by collection and shelfmark, with their new locations and identifications as relevant. It also contains all the descriptive annotations about the texts included in Diels. Like tomes two through four, it contains an index of manuscripts that also lists possible new locations and identifications, allowing one to search for manuscripts on the basis of Diels or by their present location and identification.

By reproducing Diels' inventory of, and data on, Greek medical manuscripts, by rearranging them for new investigations, and by providing them with updated identification and new instrumenta studiorum, this work aims to not only make Diels newly available in a handy format with updated information and to expand the range of its applications, but to make further strides in the direction of a general catalogue of Greek medical manuscripts. This catalogue, in turn, will lead to the much needed New Diels that may be expected to transform the study and understanding of the Greek medical literature and medicine, with their tradition.

Acknowledgements

This work is the result of decades of intensive activity in libraries, research centers, universities, and other institutions throughout the world, which have all provided resources, access to collections, expertise and guidance and, most simply, a home. I am pleased to thank all of them and their staff, even though I cannot enumerate them here. In very recent years, the work has benefitted from the active support of De Gruyter, particularly the Senior Editor for Classical Studies Dr. Serena Pirrotta and her team, especially Marco Acquafredda, and De Gruyter computer and technical units in the persons of Anne Hiller and Florian Ruppenstein who have provided much needed assistance. Going slightly back in time, Patricia Kellogg has been an efficient research assistant and Cheyenne Moore has checked the accuracy of my index of Diels against the original. Since its foundation in 2007 the Institute for the Preservation of Medical Traditions has hosted the programme. In the very last phase, Marisa Gomez has checked with great linguistic talent the correctness of the introduction to the several parts of the work. More than anyone else, Emanuela Appetiti has accompanied me through multiple peregrinations of all kinds of which this work may give only an imperfect idea. I cannot conclude without remembering Joseph A. M. Sonderkamp with whom I discussed the project of a New Diels and a catalogue of Greek medical manuscripts as early as 1983 in Berlin and then in 1987 at Louvain-la-Neuve. We had defined a cooperative programme and had started implementing it when the sinister Moira decided shortly after that we would not fully realize it in collaboration.

Indices

Index of Authors and Works

For each author in Diels, this index lists the works for which manuscripts are recorded. It comprises two lists: one with the titles in Greek, and the other with the titles in Latin. In both lists, all the names of author and the titles are provided exactly as they appear in Diels. For the author names, some are in German (e.g., Hippokrates and Galenos) and others are in Latin. For the works, some are not identified by a specific title, but by a generic Latin designation (e.g., Opera varia, Excerpta varia, or Excerpta) or by a reference to an earlier publication. Furthermore, some works do not provide either a Greek title or a Latin translation. Whatever the form, items are listed in alphabetical order and followed by the reference to the part(s) and page number of Diels' lists where they appear, with the following abbreviations: "I" for the first part, devoted to Hippocrates and Galen (published in 1905), "II" for the second part, devoted to all the other physicians (published in 1906), and "N" for the supplement (N for Nachtrag = Supplement; published in 1908). A reference appearing as II.3, for example, indicates a work mentioned in part II, page 3.

Index of Manuscripts

This index lists all the manuscripts mentioned in Diels. The identification of the manuscripts exactly reproduces that of Diels, which usually comprises the following three or four elements: city (German form), library (most of the time in the original language, often in an abbreviated form and in all cases in their form in Diels' time), collection (when appropriate), and shelfmark or reference to an earlier work. In some cases, the name of the library is not explicitly mentioned; it can be identified through the list of catalogues in Diels' bibliography where library names appear. All such elements of identification are reproduced here in boldface for purposes of clarity. For example: Florenz: Laurent. plut. 74, 1.

For each item in Diels, this index provides the reference to its mention(s) in Diels' lists as described above (p. xxxv) with the following abbreviations: "I" for the first part, devoted to Hippocrates and Galen (published in 1905), "II" for the second part, devoted to all the other physicians (published in 1906), and "N" for the supplement (N for Nachtrag = Supplement; published in 1908), followed by the page numbers (in Arabic numerals). A reference appearing as II.3, for example, indicates a manuscript mentioned in part II, page 3. In some cases, the page number is followed by a number between parentheses, e.g., II.106 (2). This indicates that the item in reference appears twice on the same page.

A Table of Concordance lists the page numbers of Diels (in the left column) with their equivalent in the present volume (in the right column).

This index is preceded by a Finding Aid which provides the city and library names in alphabetical order with reference to the present index of manuscripts, and two lists: one with the names as in Diels and the other with their current standard English name.

Bibliography

The bibliography in Diels comprises four lists: (1) the Verzeichnis der ausgenutzten Bibliotheken und Bibliothekskataloge (List of Consulted Libraries and Library Catalogues) included in the front matter (pp. XI–XXIII) of the second issue of the catalogue (1906) and reproduced in the cumulative edition (1906) of the two issues (1905 and 1906) with the same pagination; (2) some additional entries to this list in the front matter of the Nachtrag (Supplement, 1908) (pp. 23–24); and, at the end of the Nachtrag, (3) a Verzeichniss gedruckter Anonymi medici graeci (List of Printed Anonymous Greek Physicians) followed by (4) a Verzeichniss von Nachschlagwerken (Inventory of Reference Works) (pp. 70–71 and 71–72, respectively). All of these lists are reproduced here with some modifications which are detailed in the introductory notes for each of these bibliographies.

1. Catalogues of Manuscripts

The list of libraries and catalogues below merges the two original lists of Diels (that is, the 1906 and 1908 lists). Furthermore, whereas Diels' bibliography mentions the catalogue(s) of manuscripts in all the languages considered in the lists (Greek, Latin, Arabic, Syriac, and Hebrew), the present bibliography includes only the catalogues of Greek manuscripts.

The format of the resulting list has been slightly modified for purposes of clarity. In the original publication, the bibliographical list includes the full reference of the catalogues under the name of the libraries in each city. As a result, Diels' lists of catalogues by cities are rather dense and do not allow for a general perception of the vast range of works that were consulted to compile the catalogues. The bibliography below proceeds with two separate lists: the first, which lists the catalogues by country, city and library, provides references in an abbreviated form (this is the Short-reference List) and the second list (the Full-reference List) provides the full references of all catalogues cited in the first list.

The Short-reference List proceeds by country identified by its German name, as in Diels. Countries include polities that no longer exist (e.g., Österreich-Ungarn, the Austro-Hungarian Empire) and a grouping utilized by Diels (Türkey und Orient [Turkey and the East], which corresponds approximately to the Ottoman Empire in the early 20th century). The designations of the countries are those of that time (e.g., Russland [Russia]) as is also their extension (portions of modern Greece and the Greek islands do not appear under Griechenland [Greece], for example, but under Türkey und Orient [Turkey and the East], and such a city as Wroclaw, identified here by its German name Breslau, is included in Deutschland (Germany) whereas it is in modern-day Poland). Countries, polities, and groupings identified as above are listed here in the alphabetical order of their name whereas in Diels they are listed according to a clockwise movement that proceeds in three concentric circles. The first such circle, which might be identified as Mediterranean and northwestern European, goes from Portugal to Italy passing through France and including Belgium, Holland and Switzerland. The second circle, which might be defined as north-central European, goes from England to Germany to Austria-Hungary. The third circle, Scandinavo-Asian in nature, includes Denmak, Sweden and Russia. This repartition is completed by the region on the East, with Greece, Turkey and the East.

In both Diels and the present list, the section devoted to each country lists the cities alphabetically by name. These names are mostly in German (e.g., Athen, Brüssel, Florenz, Kopenhagen, Moskau, Venedig), but sometimes in their original form (e.g., Bologna) or a Latinized form (e.g., Mileae for Μηλιές). Libraries within each city are designated, both in Diels and the present bibliography, by the German translation of their name (in most cases) or their original name (often in an abbreviated form and, for some of them, in the original Greek alphabet). All city and library names are printed in boldface for purposes of clarity, both in Diels and here.

The short references of catalogues provided in the Short-reference List here provide a standardized abbreviated form of the catalogue titles. This abbreviation is made of the author's last name or the title of a work, followed by the year of publication. Titles of works always reflect Diels' usage and might be a title sensu proprio, the general title of a series followed by a volume number in such series, or even the title of a journal with the number of the pages where the publication referred to appears.

The Short-reference List is followed here by the Full-reference List, which reproduces the abbreviated form of the title used in the Short-reference List in boldface, immediately followed by the full form of the title according to standard bibliographical practice. Besides providing the key to abbreviations used in the list of catalogues by city and library, this second list allows for a clear vision of the range of catalogues consulted by Diels and his collaborators, something that the original publication does not make possible.

The section devoted to each country opens with the general catalogues as in Diels' original publication. Within each subsection (city and library) items are listed in chronological order of publication.

2. Editions of Anonymous Greek Medical Texts

This bibliography of printed anonymous Greek medical texts provides references to the edition of ca. fifty anonymous texts found in manuscripts and papyri. Although it is not comprehensive, in a certain way it complements the lists of manuscripts by authors and texts which make up the substance of Diels.

Though not explicitly divided into two parts, this bibliography comprises two sections: texts in manuscripts and texts in papyri (in this order). These two parts are clearly distinguished here. In both, items are identified as they are in Diels, by the title of the text (in many cases in Greek) or by another type of title (from an edition or from the scholarly tradition). These titles are exactly reproduced here in boldface for purposes of clarity. They are listed in alphabetical order and followed by the reference to the edition(s) listed in Diels. Whereas in Diels, these references are mostly in an abbreviated form, they are fully expanded here, and formatted according to standard bibliographical practice. In several cases, more than one edition is mentioned in Diels. All are listed here in chronological order. In some cases, such different editions are distinguished in Diels by textual characteristics (e.g., the incipit of the text). All these distinctive elements are exactly reproduced here.

In some cases, new elements of identification of the works referred to are added here (for instance, the exact pages where the edition of the text can be read).

3. Reference Works

The list of reference works provided at the end of the 1908 Nachtrag (Supplement) provides over 40 titles referenced in a summary form. It is reproduced below with the full references of cited works formatted according to current standard bibliographical practices. For purposes of clarity, full references are introduced by a short reference in boldface, utilizing the last name of the author(s) and the year of publication of the work. The full reference follows in regular typeface.

Listed works range from the classical Elenchus medicorum veterum compiled by Johann Albert Fabricius (1668–1736) and published in 1726 or the Bibliothecae (botanica, chirurgica, anatomica and medicinae practicae) by Albrecht von Haller (1708–1777) published between 1771 and 1788, to the more recent inventoires and descriptions of Greek medical manuscripts by Georges Costomiris (1849–1902), the revised edition (then in the making) of Paulys Realencyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft or the recent Hanbuch der Geschichte der Medizin edited by Max Neuburger (1868–1955) and Julius Pagel (1851–1912). The works are mostly in German, with some in French and few in English, besides earlier works in Latin. While they reflect the intellectual tradition of which Diels' catalogues were the heirs, they also integrate the new medical history in the making at that time, with a broad range of disciplines: neurology, ophthalmology, obstetrics, surgery, epidemiology, venereology, and surgery, in addition to pharmacy, botany and materia medica, and also medical education and hospital.

Diels' Catalogue of Greek Medical Manuscripts
in two parts (1905 and 1906) with a Supplement (1908)

Introduction

Diels' catalogue of manuscripts is reproduced here ad litteram. Its presentation has been modified, however, for clarity purposes. Whereas items in Diels follow each other so as to form blocks of continuous text, in the present work they are presented in the form of a list, where each line corresponds to one item. The typographic device used in Diels (boldface) to highlight city names, has been maintained. City and library names here are aligned on the left margin while the list of manuscripts related to each such city and library is indented. If the holdings of a library comprise several collections, the same principle of indentation has been used. The several collections are distinguished at the first level of indentation, with the items under each such collection further indented. An example of this layout is as follows:

Rom:
- Palat. 192; s. XV. f. 1.
- Reg. Suec. 182; s. XV. f. 16.
- Urbin.
  - 64*; s. X—XI. f. 116 (» ἐκ τοῦ κατὰ τὸν Ἱππ. ὅρκου, καθ' ὅσον οἷόν τε Χριστιανῷ ὀμόσαι«).
  - 68; s. XIV. f. 4 (Ilbergs Coll. in dessen Besitz).
- Vatic.
  - 276; s. XII. f. 1 (Ilbergs Coll. in dessen Besitz).
  - 277; s. XIV. f. 25 (Ilbergs Coll. in dessen Besitz).
  - 278; a. 1512. f. 27^{v}.
  - 2238; s. XV. f. 180.
  - 2304 (olim 2217); s. XV. f. 1.

Since the original layout of Diels' pages could not be exactly reproduced by way of this variant presentation of data, references to Diels pages have been included. For ease of recognition, these references are placed in the external margin of the pages. They appear between brackets ([ ]) and comprise two elements: an identifier which refers to the first or second issue of Diels' catalogues (I or II, respectively, published in 1905 and 1906) or the supplement (N for Nachtrag = Supplement; published in 1908), and a number in Arabic numerals (from 3 to 151) referring to the page of Diels' catalogues. The marginal reference [I.3], for example, thus refers to page 3 of part I (about Hippocrates and Galen, published in 1905).

The Manuscripts of Greek Physicians

Hippocrates and Galen

Hippocrates

Under the title Zeichenerklärung (Table of Symbols), Diels' catalogue includes some abbreviations and sigla, the list of which appears on page 2 of the first issue of the catalogue (1905). Those abbreviations, utilized precisely in the present reproduction of Diels are the following with their respective explicitation:

* = die Hds. enthält nur Exzerpte.
[ ] = die Hds. ist nur aus Ackermann's Hist. litteraria Hippocratis (Kühn Med. Gr. Opp. XXI, 1 ff.) und Hist. litt. Cl. Galeni (Kühn M. G. O. I, XVII ff.) oder aus Littré (Œuvr. compl. d'Hippocr. Par. 1839—61. 10 Bde.) bekannt.
J. = Galenus, editio Iuntina 1528 (Exemplar der Vatikanischen Handbibliothek).
K. = Kühn.
L. = Littré.

* = the manuscript contains only extracts.
[ ] = the manuscript is known only through Ackermann's Hist. litteraria Hippocratis (Kühn Med. Gr. Opp. XXI, 1 sq.) and Hist. litt. Cl. Galeni (Kühn M. G. O. I, XVII ff.) or Littré (Œuvr. compl. d'Hippocr. Par. 1839—61. 10 vols).
J. = Galen, Iuntina 1528 edition (copy of the Vatican Library).
K. = Kühn.
L. = Littré.

Under the title Zeichenerklärung (Table of Symbols), Diels' catalogue includes some abbreviations and sigla, the list of which appears on page 2 of the first issue of the catalogue (1905). Those abbreviations, utilized precisely in the present reproduction of Diels are the following with their respective explicitation:

* = die Hds. enthält nur Exzerpte.
[ ] = die Hds. ist nur aus Ackermann's Hist. litteraria Hippocratis (Kühn Med. Gr. Opp. XXI, 1 ff.) und Hist. litt. Cl. Galeni (Kühn M. G. O. I, XVII ff.) oder aus Littré (Œuvr. compl. d'Hippocr. Par. 1839—61. 10 Bde.) bekannt.
J. = Galenus, editio Iuntina 1528 (Exemplar der Vatikanischen Handbibliothek).
K. = Kühn.
L. = Littré.

[ ] = the manuscript is known only through Ackermann's Hist. litteraria Hippocratis (Kühn Med. Gr. Opp. XXI, 1 sq.) and Hist. litt. Cl. Galeni (Kühn M. G. O. I, XVII ff.) or Littré (Œuvr. compl. d'Hippocr. Par. 1839—61. 10 vols).
